PHILADELPHIA,

FRIDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 7.

ADDRESS,

TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,

SIR,

A fundamental principle among Maſons, in their private aſſemblies, is, not to introduce the ſubject of politicks; leſt, from a difference of ſentiment, the harmony of the Lodge might be diſturbed. But, a maxim of equal importance is conſtantly inculcated by the brethren of the craft—to be willing and obedient ſubjects to the government under which they live.

Impreſſed with theſe ſentiments, at a time when jealouſy is induſtriouſly propagated againſt our fraternity; the members of the Grand Lodge of Vermont, aſſembled in ample form, compoſed of its officers, and a repreſentation from thirteen ſecular lodges, under its juriſdiction, with that promptitude which becomes true American citizens, beg leave to expreſs to you their moſt entire and unequivocal approbation of your official conduct ſince called to fill the chair of ſtate.

We rejoice, that, although your ſituation has been delicate, and your public conduct viewed with the jaundiced eye of diſtruſt and envy; yet that your wiſdom, firmneſs and deciſion, have ſtrengthened the affection of your friends, and defeated the ſeditious machinations of your enemies.

It is unneceſſary, and may even be deemed unbecoming men profeſſing univerſal philanthropy, to enter into a detail of the unjuſt aggreſſions of a foreign nation, upon our country, uniformly diſpoſed to peace, but ever alive to unprovoked injuries.

Permit us, Sir, to ſay—that we glory in our country—that we glory in being Americans—that we feel an inviolable attachment to that country which gave us birth—that we feel an attachment to our conſtituted authorities—and, eſpecially, that we feel an attachment, an inviolable attachment, to our Chief Magiſtrate. Let not the tongue of ſlander ſay, that Maſons are capable of faction! Although ſome among us, as in all ſocieties, may ſell their birth-right for a meſs of pottage; or betray their country for paltry pelf, yet, be aſſured, Sir, that as a body, we are determined to ſupport our country's rights. We are determined to ſupport our government. And, are determined, upon a thorough conviction of the purity of the motives which have invariably dictated its adminiſtration, to riſque our all in its ſupport and defence. Can we ſay more?

Give us leave, Sir, to cloſe this ſhort addreſs, with the warmeſt aſſurances of our perſonal reſpect; and to join, in one general ſupplication to the great architect, the grand Maſter above—to give you wiſdom, to direct—ſtrength to endure—and virtue to ſupport you, in the various dignified ſpheres of life, through which, by your country, you may be called to move; and, at laſt, introduce you to that temple above, a houſe not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

ANSWER,

To the Members of the Grand Lodge of Free Maſons in Vermont aſſembled in ample form compoſed of its officers, and a repreſentation from thirteen ſecular lodges.

GENTLEMEN,

I thank you for this obliging addreſs which has been tranſmitted to me as you deſired by his excellency the Governor of the ſtate of Vermont. I have ever eſteemed the ſocieties of Free Maſons in this country, not only as innocent, but uſeful.

The principle, not to introduce politics in your private aſſemblies, and the other principle, to be willing ſubjects to the government, would if obſerved, preſerve ſuch ſocieties from ſuſpicion. But it ſeems to be to be agreed, that the ſociety of Maſons have diſcovered a ſcience of government, or an art of ruling ſociety, peculiar to themſelves, and unknown to all the other legiſlators and philoſophers of the world—I mean not only the ſkill to know each other by marks or ſigns, that no other perſons can divine; but the wonderful power of enabling and compelling all men and I ſuppoſe all women, at all hours, to keep a ſecret. If this art can be applied, to ſet aſide the ordinary maxims of the ſociety, and introduce politics and diſobedience to government, and ſtill keep the ſecret, it muſt be obvious, that ſuch ſcience and ſuch ſocieties may be perverted to all the ill purpoſes which have been ſuſpected. The characters which compoſe the lodges in America are ſuch, as forbid every apprehenſion from them, and they will beſt know whether any dangers are poſſible in other countries as well as this.

The approbation you ſo obligingly expreſs of my official conduct, ſince called to the chair of ſtate, and your opinion, that it has ſtrengthened the affection of my friends are highly eſteemed.

I ſay cordially with you, let not the tongue of ſlander ſay, that Maſons in America are capable of faction. I am very confident it cannot be ſaid by any one with truth of the Maſons of Vermont. You have ſaid enough and the characteriſtics of candor, which accompany your words, leave no room to doubt of your ſincerity, that you will riſque all, in ſupport of your government. And in theſe pious and virtuous reſolutions may the Architect Eternal and Almighty have you always in his holy keeping.

JOHN ADAMS.
November 30.

ADDRESS,

To the PRESIDENT of the UNITED STATES.

WHILE the communities, corporations, towns, cities and legiſlatures of your country, are crowding to approach you with addreſſes of approbation and gratitude, will you, Sir, permit the Legiſlature of the State of Vermont, to join the general voice? Among the lateſt to addreſs, we would be conſidered as among the foremoſt to approve your official conduct.

We have been repreſented as a divided people; but, this report has been fabricated and cheriſhed by thoſe, whoſe deſtructive policy would lead them firſt to excite diſunion, and, like the incendiary, to profit by the confuſion which they have created. That the great bulk of our citizens are firmly attached to our excellent federal conſtitution of government, and highly approve its adminiſtration, you may be aſſured, is an incontrovertible fact. That ſome men ſhould not appreciate its advantages, or that ſome ſhould be bad enough to ſtrike at its very exiſtence, is not ſtrange. When we conſider government, as the aſſociation of the honeſt, the pious and the peaceable, to protect themſelves from the wickedneſs of the diſhoneſt, impious and unruly, it is not ſtrange that, if the beneficial deſigns of the former be effected, the latter will complain, and attempt to break every barrier which protects ſociety. We know of no government, ancient or modern, that was ever celebrated for its excellency, whoſe archives were not diſgraced with the impediments of oppoſition; and the page of whoſe hiſtory is not ſtained, with frequent inſurrections. Even under the divine theocracy of the Jews, the people murmured againſt plenty; and, while their firſt magiſtrate was in immediate conference with heaven, for their good, a ſtupid faction of that people, loſt the remembrance of their divine government, in the adoration of a molten God.

But you, Sir, can accurately diſtinguiſh, between the voice of your country, and the clamor of party. We here offer you, Sir, the genuine ſentiments of our conſtituents, the freemen of Vermont, as delivered through their conſtitutional organ, the Legiſlature.

In the infancy of French political reformation with our brethren of the United States, we wiſhed well to the cauſe of French patriotiſm, becauſe we ſuppoſed it the cauſe of virtue, religion, and rational liberty.—But, when gallic vrtue, was ſucceeded by licentiouſneſs and inhumanity—when religion gave place to atheiſm, and rational liberty to grevious oppreſſion—when no longer contented with abortive attempts to reform their own government, they boldly obtruded their political creeds upon the order and tranquility of other nations; and with rapacious ambition, unknown to their proudeſt monarchs, diſſolved ancient governments, and annexed plundered provinces to their own blood-ſtained territories; when they violated the neutral rights of the United States—commiſſioned their ambaſſadors to excite us to foreign war, and domeſtic inſurrection; and made the moſt unprovoked depredations on our commerce,—when they inſulted our meſſeogers of peace, and inſidiouſly attempted to degrade them into the mean inſtruments, of ſubjecting their country to a ſcandalous tribute,—when they refuſed to ſtop the hand of plunder, for a little period, while our government might attempt, by diſcuſſion, or conceſſion, to avert the calamities of war,—when they violently, and inſidiouſly ſtruck at our national independence, every tie of affection for Frenchmen was diſſolved; and we clearly perceived, that we could no longer be attached to that nation, but at the expence of our morals, our religion, and the love of our country.

Sir, this is a day which calls loudly for deciſion; and we are proud to declare, our attachment to the conſtitution of the United States. We believe its proſperity deeply involves our own. We have the firmeſt reliance on the executive adminiſtration of our general government. Your inſtructions to our national envoys to France, carry conviction with them, of your uprightneſs.—Your reſolution, to ſend no other envoys to that haughty nation, unleſs previouſly aſſured of their honorable reception, evidences, beyond doubt, your firm attachment to the intereſt and honor of your country. You have juſtified your country, in the face of the world; and, if the conſequence of French duplicity and rapacity, ſhall involve us in a war, which we pray heaven to avert, we pledge ourſelves to our country, for our firmeſt ſupport of her violated rights.

Permit us, Sir, to add aſſurances of our perſonal reſpect;—while we honor you, as our chief magiſtrate, we reſpect you as a man; and it is to YOUR GLORY we can ſay—we regard JOHN ADAMS, becauſe we LOVE OUR COUNTRY.

ANSWER.

To the Legiſlature of the State of Vermont.

GENTLEMEN,

YOUR addreſs of the twenty-fourth of October, has been forwarded to me, as you deſired, by his Excellency Iſaac Tichenor, your worthy Governor. Among all the addreſſes, which have been preſented to me from communities, corporations, towns, cities and legiſlatures, there has been none more acceptable to me, or which has affected my ſenſibility or commanded my gratitude more, than this very ſentimental compliment from the Legiſlature of Vermont; a ſtate, which, within my memory, has been converted from a wilderneſs to a fruitful field. Knowing, as I do, your origin and progreſs, the brave, hardy, induſtrious and temperate character of the people, the approbation of their repreſentatives, their attachment to the conſtitution and determination to ſupport the government, are the more to be eſteemed.

While we truly conſider government, as the aſſociation of the honeſt, the pious and the peaceable, to protect themſelves from the wickedneſs of the diſhoneſt, the impious and unruly, we ſhould never forget, that government, at the ſame time, ought to protect the diſhoneſt, the impious and unruly, not only from the fraud and the fury of each other, but from the errors, miſtakes and weakneſſes of the honeſt and pious.

There is too much truth in your obſervation, that the moſt excellent goverments have had their archives diſgraced with impediments of oppoſition and frequent inſurrections. The true cauſe of it is, that while the honeſt and pious are always diſpoſed to ſubmit to good government, and chooſe the mildeſt, the diſhoneſt and impious take advantage of the feeble reſtraint, to commit miſchief, becauſe it can be done with impunity. This in courſe introduces the neceſſity of ſeverer curbs for the wicked, and then the fordid animal becomes too tame under the curb, the laſh, and the ſpur. While a tenderneſs of blood and a reſpect for human life is preſerved among the people, however, there is not much danger, even from tumults. This maxim preſerved the Romans, who, for four hundred years, never ſhed the blood of a man in a ſedition. An example worthy the contemplation and imitation of all other republics.

The French have rendered it impoſſible for us to follow them in their notions and projects of government, or to ſubmit to their arbitrary conduct and extravagant exactions to us; we muſt therefore defend ourſelves agaainſt all they can attempt.

It is not poſſible for my fellow-citizens to ſay any thing more glorious or delightful to me, than that they regard me, becauſe they love their country.

JOHN ADAMS.

ANSWER.

To the SEVENTY-SIXTH REGIMENT of the MILITIA of VERMONT.

GENTLEMEN,

I THANK you for your addreſs of the twenty-ſecond of October. Your ſentiments of the late conduct of the French, ſeems to be conformable to the general ſenſe of the world at large, as well as almoſt the unanimous opinion of all America at preſent.

A republic that is not bound by the laws of the majority, is an ariſtocracy or an oligarchy, and commonly more oppreſſive than monarchy. Mixed governments alone have been able effectually to aſcertain the deliberate will, and to enforce the laws of the majority; and ſuch is the conſtitution of the United States. Your reſolution to conform to it, does you honor. Your good wiſhes for my health, are humbly received and ſincerely reciprocated.

MR. DAVIS,

I find by a late paper, the capture of Gen. Buonaparte is ſo far confirmed, that politicians for and againſt, gave it credit. I wiſh not to be conſidered an enemy to that brave and humane man—for from the commencement of his career, to the preſent moment, I have revered the man and admired his actions—But divide Buonaparte into two ſyllables, leaving out the a, which I ſuppoſe to be ſuperfluous, you will find its tranſlation into Engliſh to be typical, figurative, and ſignificant,—of a large part or proportion, of the naval and land ſtrength of that ſacrilegious and barbarous nation, which he now honors with his ſervices—the other part, which every well informed man will not hefitate to ſtile the refuſe of the nation, together with the council of 500 and five directors, with Talleyrand, the Jeſuit and impoſtor—I will leave under the care and guardianſhip of John Bull, who will ſhortly give them a government and laws, conſiſtent with the dignity of rational beings, nurtured and brought up under the care and protection of the common Father of ALL. DOCTOR QUACK.

FRANCE.

COUNCIL OF ANCIENTS,
29th Fructidor.

The Council received a meſſage by which the Directory has yeſterday appriſed the Council of Five Hundred of the deſcent of the French army into Egypt.

"Europe is not ſufficient," ſays Lemercier, to ſerve as a theatre for our victories. Africa muſt alſo behold the triumphs of the children of France. The Nile waits impatiently for the preſence of our valorous Cohorts, of the ſons of victory, who are to reſtore it to its ancient ſplendor.—Without doubt, this expedition, directed by genius, confided to talents and courage—this expedition will be fully effected. The deſcendants of the ancient Egyptians will be avenged for the ſpoilations to which they have been ſubjected, and bring theſe beautiful regions back to that ſtate of civilization with which they were formerly dignified. We have as a guarantee the bravery of our Warriors:—Inſtead of making from the firſt of their conqueſts, in this expedition, a new Capau, they did not remain in that Iſland (which has reſiſted all the forces of Solyman) only a ſufficient length of time to enſure it irrevocably to the Republic, and immediately departed for the ſhores where they were to cull new laurels. Already they have avenged our moſt faithful Ally, the Porte, on the uſurpers who had forgotten his authority. Already have they avenged the French for the inſults and outrages to which they have been expoſed under the government of the tyrannical Beys. They have at this time opened again the channels of commerce, and their firſt ſucceſſes have already given freedom to a part of the ocean."

The Council unanimouſly approved the reſolution of yeſterday, which declares that the army of France, in Egypt, has deſerved well of its country.

We are much indebted to a mercantile houſe in this city for the loan of a file of Paris and Bourdeaux papers from the 21ſt Fructidor to the 3d Complimentary day (or 19th Sept.) received by the brigs Fox and Endeavour, arrived yeſterday from Bordeax. The lateneſs of the hour at which we received them, prevents our making full tranſlations from them for this day's paper. We ſhall be aſſiduous in ſelecting from them all that is intereſting and worthy of detail for to-morrow's publication.

In the Journal de Bordeaux of the 20th Sept. we obſerve that the Preſident's communication to the Senate, relative to the appointment of General Waſhington to the command of the armies of the United States, as alſo the General's acceptation of it, is known in France. That part of his letter to the Preſident in reply, which ſtates his ideas with reſpect to the conduct of the French government towards this country, is ſtated and publiſhed by the editor of the Bordeaux Journal.

Under date of Philadelphia, 10th Thermidor, he ſays: "The preparations for war continue with the greateſt activity by ſea and land in the United States."

PARIS, 27 Fructidor.

General Buonaparte has announced with his own hand, his arrival at Alexandria to Citizen Ruffin, charge d'Affaire from the Republic to Conſtantinople. Ruffin has ſent a copy of this letter to the directory.

The director Rewbel has arrived at Paris; his health appears to be entirely re-eſtabliſhed.

By the treaty of ſubſidy concluded with England, Ruſſia has engaged to furniſh her with 20,000 men, who are not to be employed, but in Europe.

28 Fructidor.

The uncertainty with reſpect to peace, and the movements of the French troops, has been very detrimental to the Fair of Franckfort.

The French troops are concentered in the environs of Friedberg, and menace a formidable irruption into Franconia if the Congreſs of Raſtadt do not come to a concluſion.

The preparations for war are carrying on at Vienna with more activity than ever. The enliſtments are made forcibly. Recruiting continues in Bohemia—The diviſions of reſerve have received orders to hold themſelves in readineſs to march.

All ſtrangers are ordered to leave Rome in 24 hours, under pain of being treated as ſpies, and judged by the military tribunal. They are allowed only 5 days to leave the territory of the Republic; after which no ſtranger ſhall enter it without a regular paſſport, executed either by the French or Roman authority.

They write from Duſſeldorff, that the French army is in full march for the frontiers of Hanover. There is no doubt but this hereditary country of the king of England will ſhortly come under the dominion of the Republic.

The brothers Arbaud, rich merchants of Toulon, were arreſted 30 Thermidor as returned emigrants.

FRIEDBERG, (Head-Quarters.)
14 Fructidor.

The army commanded by General Joubert, which is entirely concentrated upon the borders of the Nidda and on the other ſide, wait momently for final orders to move, and to march in ſeveral columns to the centre of Germany. In the mean time, the preparations for war are continued with unabated vigour. The troops have moved forward, and the artillery is carried towards Limbourg on the Lahn.—The magazines on that river are filled. The pioneers work without intermiſſion in conſtructing the neceſſary objects for the prompt eſtabliſhment of bridges.—In ſhort every department is in a ſtate of ſingular activity.

HAGUE, 13 Fructidor.

It is confidently ſaid that our government is about to interfere, as mediator, to ſettle the differences which have ariſen, between France and the United States. The directory of France, it is ſaid, has already accepted this mediation, and our miniſter at Paris is ſhortly to make the firſt arrangements.

BUONAPARTE'S PROCLAMATION
TO HIS SOLDIERS,
On entering Egypt.

"Soldiers, behave towards the Mahometans in the ſame manner we did towards the Jews and the Italians; reſpect their Muftis and their Imans, as you did the Rabbis and the Biſhops. Have as much regard for the ceremonies which the Alcoran and Mahometan Temple (or church) requires, as you had for the Cloiſters, for the Synagogues, and for the religion of Moſes and of our Saviour"

General Barbois and the commiſſary Regnault have publiſhed at Malta an account of the battle between the two fleets off Alexandria. Citizen gen. Ganthcaume, who was on board the L'Orient, had eſcaped from that ſhip before ſhe blew up.

On board the frigate Diana, arrived at Malta, came contre admiral Decres.

In Toulon a ſubſcription has been opened for the widows and orphans of ſeamen who fell in the battle before Alexandria.

In the harbors of the Mediterranean, ſuch as Toulon, Corfu, Acona, Malta, &c. the French have 12 ſhips of the line, and about 12 frigates.

It is ſuppoſed at Bordeaux, that a new embargo will be laid on American veſſels in that port.

FORTLAND, November 26th.

Meſers Baker and George,

I find in a Portſmouth paper a falſe and ſcandalous article which has been republiſhed in a paper printed in this town; but which beg to contradict through the channel of The Eaſtern Hertld and Gazette of Maine. It is as follows:

"Portsmouth Nov. 14.

Capt. Moulton, lately arrived here from Jaimaica, Nov. 8, ſpoke ſchooner Rachel, two days from Portland, being ſhort of water and proviſions boarded her—ſupplied us with twenty gallons of water, eight biſcuit, half dozen poultry—for the poultry the Captain made us pay ſix dollars, and for one Barrel potatoes four dollars, and for a few other ſmall matters at the ſame extravagant rate, ſaying he would not ſupply us unleſs we would ſay him the ſame price he could get in the Weſt Indies."

Now, that there is no ſuch veſſel owned at, or ſails from, this port, is a fact that can be atteſted by every merhant and maſter of veſſels in town; and it would be utterly impoſſible that a man of the character deſcribed by Capt. Moulton ſhould be employed as maſter of a veſſel belonging to Portland. Such a baſe charactor would be viewed with abhorrence, and diſdained by every

Let there be a Fleet—and there is a Fleet!
(Acts of the Fed Legiſ.)

Among other objects of anti federal cenſure, the Infant Navy of the Union has been repreſented as pitiful in its preſent ſtate, and dangerous in its probable advancement. This is one of the daily contradictions, by which our diſorganizers attempt to delude the people and diſtract the government: They wiſh, as the ſailors ſay, "to head us on both tacks;" but as I do not imagine our fellow-citizens will be readily induced to queſtion the utility of an armed marine, whilſt their commercial relations are ſo extenſive and ſo precarious, as at this inſtant; and as the general re-election of their late defenſive-war repreſentatives, is an irrefragable evidence of their confidence in the actual government and laws of the union, I ſhall merely refute the alledged improbability of deriving any permanent advantage, from ſo "pitiful a navy as that of the United States," by a few extracts from a late work, in which the Riſe and Progreſs of the Marine Force of Great Britain is fully detailed The original is entitled: "Memoir on Britiſh Naval Architecture; by Ralph Willet, Eſq. IN ſuch of the Roman Catholic countries, where ſuperſtition ſtill has a hold, there is an order of prieſts called Friars, who cannot by law exerciſe certain functions belonging to the higher orders of the prieſthood—a young lady ſome years ago called into a monaſtery at a place called Calnetta, in the iſland of Madeira in order to confeſs, and finding a Friar (or brother) of that houſe alone in one of the chapels, ſhe kneeled down by him and told him all her ſins—The Friar ſaid nothing—ſhe aſked him for abſolution—'I am no prieſt (ſaid the Friar) I cannot give you abſolution'—no prieſt! ſaid the lady, very much ſurpriſed, and in a great paſſion.—No, madam, anſwered the Friar, drily—'Well ſaid ſhe, I'll go and complain to to your ſuperiors, for your daring to take my confeſſion—and I'll go, (returned the Friar) and tell all your blabbing to your huſband!—mum was the word.

TRANSLATION

OF THE LETTER FROM LOWER SAXONY,
September 26th, 1798.

Roſſeau has ſaid,
"L'inexperience indocile
"Du Compagnon de Paul-Emile
"Fit tout le ſuccès d'Annibal," but Roſſeau has not obſcured the glory of the Carthagenian Hero; the glory of Nelſon loſes none of its luſtre in the known ignorance of the inexperienced marine over which he has triumphed—their poſition and their courage might have ſupplied the abſence of ſkill, had he not rendered that poſition and courage uſeleſs. What would have been inſolent and diſaſtrous raſhneſs before an adroit an adroit antagoniſt, was in the preſence of the French ſailors a wiſe and fortunate boldneſs.

It was in poſting his ſquadron between the French ſhips and the batteries which protected them, in the daring and unexpected manœvre of at once braving the dangers of the coaſt and the fire of the enemy, it was in the midſt of theſe perils that Nelſon conquered and atchieved the moſt triumphant victory that ever graced the Britiſh Flag. It was by the ſame hardy tactics, never practiſed againſt fleets well commanded, and by the bold manœuvres that Howe, Jervis, Duncan, and all thoſe admirals have triumphed, who for a ſeries of years have, each in their turn ſtruck and humiliated the flags of the republic and he allies.

But Nelſon has been ſtill more hardy than either of them—The ſituation of the enemy required him to be ſo, and the conſequences of his triumph are beyond all compariſon with the ſucceſs of the admirals whoſe victories I have noticed.

IT is true that the emulation excited by one victory produces another—and that a Howe and a Lewis, covered with fortnne and honor, have created a Duncan and a Nelſon. But triumphs, which have only won a few ſhips from the republic which have not occaſioned to it the loſs of one eſſential man, which have not fruſtrated any of its great projects, ought not to be compared with a victory, which may occaſion the loſs of Buonaparte, and which may ſave Egypt, India, Europe itſelf; and the whole world from the domination of the directory.

Nelſon has broken, before Alexandria, the ſceptre of the Mediterranean, which the French had ſeized at Malta, and from the moment in which this victory was atchieved, all the advantages attached to the ſovereignty of that ſea, have been loſt to France—advantages which, in a courſe of years, might have balanced the ſovereignty of the ocean itſelf.

Yet if Nelſon, in deſtroying the fleet of Buonaparte, has only rendered to that general a ſervice, which other great generals have performed for themſelves; if his troops, having no poſſible retreat, are animated with increaſed ardor; if with their uſual valor, they connect the courage of deſpair, if they are reinforced by ſome thouſands of men ſaved from their fleet, and if every obſtacle ſhould yield to the impetuoſity of their united force; if they ſhould become maſters of Egypt and the red ſea, if they ſhould march to India, or embark for that country under the protection of a French ſquadron at the mouth of the ſtreights of Babel-Mandel; if at length they ſhould arrive in thoſe regions which daily nouriſh the fortune and the force of Great-Britain; and if they ſhould there ſubvert her power; what advantage will ſhe derive from the victory of her admiral, and to what purpoſe tends the glory of her flag?

Such are the hypotheſes now formed, and, in the doubt which is raiſed upon them, conſiſts the conſolation of the friends of the directory, and the enemies of England—For my part, Sir, whoſe opinions are thoſe of a coſmopholite, and whom no one will accuſe of having diſguiſed the danger with which the expedition of Buonaparte threatened England and the independence of Europe, I no longer entertain any apprehenſions from that general or from the expedition in which he is embarked.
